How to Make Farming Fay.

The drive between Plymouth and Center Harbor is set down as a notable one, but take care to make it from Center Harbor to Plymouth, instead of the reverse, therewise you will have the high mountains behind you and will not see them as you go. A certain bridge was down, and we were forced to go round by Ashland, thus extending the aircady long drive to something like 20 miles. "There's some folks that make farming pay," said my driver, pointing to a place we passed.

"How!" I demanded, thinking to hear of some new plan.

"Thoy work," he replied.

The remark was intended as a fling at "lay farmers," of whom, rightly or wrongly, one hears much.—William Henry Blabop on "Abandoned Farms" in Century.

at 12 o'clock noon of said day at my sales rooms on Queen street, in Homolulu (unlessooner disposed of at private sale) the following described property, namely:

A tract of land about 2,380 acres in fee simple situate at Kolo and Olciomogna I in South Kona, Island of Hawaii, about eight miles by a good road from Hookena, one of the largest villages in Kona. There is an excellent landing on the land itself from where the coffee and other produce could be shipped and a good site for a mill near the landing. Fifty agree of land are in coffee. Roughly estimated they take the landing is a considered and are income of the Government Road: Eight hundred acres lying all in one block on both sines of the Government Road: Eight hundred acres lying above and to the East of the seven hundred acres above mentioned is also excellent land and although at a higher allitude is no doubt also well adapted for coffee culture. The lower land below the coffee best is satisfate for pinesaples and sisal. There is a drying house, store and sisal. There is a partly walled. There have testified to this fact. There is a sen fashery appurtenant to Oleiomoana l.

A map of the property can be seen and tracker particulars obtained at my sales room and the improval study of Russia.

Jas. F. Morgan,

Mr. Stokes will have these young horses trained and trotted. All stakes open to the horses of this country should be open to them. If the Russians have bester horses than we possess, every facility should be given to Mr. Stokes to demonstrate the fact.

BICYCLES AGAIN.

Shepherd's Plaids and Moire Antique. Soungled Belts and Trimmings. The bicycling season is approaching, and those fair weather riders who do up their machines in vaseline and put them away for the winter are thinking about getting them out and preparing them for action unless they have concluded to obtain new ones. It used to be said that a bleycle was more desirable than a horse because it was cheaper and required no food, but repairs and the renewing of accessories form quite a bill by themselves, while now a rider is behind the times who does not have a new wheel every year. Nobody thinks of changing his horse every year. In London there is a great fancy for dark tweed bicycle costumes, consisting of a skirt and coat with white facings, and the hats worn by women on the wheel are gayly trimmed instead of showing the severity that is preferred in America.

Shepherd's plaids of gray, brown and black are shown in thin twilled wool among the spring dress materials, and few things are neater and prettier for a plain street gown for warm weather use. Moire antique is seen again, not only in silk, but in popilip, although it had its day, one might have thought, two years ago, when all watered effects were so much worn. The watered popilins are, however, very beautiful and are to be had in all evening shades and some dark ones.

The liking for metal trimmings has not yet begun to wane. Spanigled belts are among the later developments of the fancy. They are newer than the gold ribbon belts, which are still worn, and are more serviceable, as the gold ribbon soon tarnishes, while the spangles do not.

The capote of which an illustration is given is intended for dress wear and is of mirorly edvect of the shade known as "rose de bengale." At each side of the front is a cluster of rose leaves, in the middle of which is a rosebud. The collar is composed of curled ostrich tips, above which is a frill of white lace.

made of narrow striped or dotted silk or satin, is a far better addition for those of ampler proportions.

Fashion now permits great latitude with regard to headwear, and women are not obliged to adopt uniformly large or small hats and bonnets. If one style is not becoming, there are plenty of others from which to select, and shape, size and trimming may be chosen to suit the individual, with no risk of appearing out of date.

Although sleeves are actually beginning to diminish a little—that is, the newest and most elegant costume models show smaller sleeves—the fashionable skirt is still from six to eight yards around the foot. However, as soon as the upper part of the gown shrinks decidedly the skirt is sure to decrease also.

The bell gown illustrated has a godet skirt of Louis Seize taffeta, the pink ground having a brocke pattern of bows and roses in green and pink. The bodice, of plain pink taffeta, is slightly draped across the bosom and has a heart shaped decolletage. Epanlets of pink roses are carried across the shoulders, and one rose is placed in the middle of the front. The short balloon sleeves are draped by a rose.
